

CONSERVATIVE PASSIVE PLUS PORTFOLIO

Objective: To grow the real (inflation adjusted) value of capital, from a diversified mix of defensive and growth assets, from a portfolio of mostly passive funds.

Investor Profile

The Conservative Passive Plus Portfolio aims to cater for retail or professional investors, over the long-term, looking for:

Cost effective portfolio

A low-cost portfolio, with a focus on passive funds.

Inflation beating returns

Total returns keeping pace with/ahead of inflation.

Capital Stability/Preservation

A diversified portfolio, with a bias towards defensive assets.

Volatility less than equity investing

Returns that are less volatile than investing solely in equities.

The portfolio is in this category due to historic risk and return characteristics demonstrated in the performance simulation, alongside the expected growth asset range between 35% - 55%. A risk indicator of "1" does not mean the investment is risk free.

Market and Portfolio Update

President Trump continues to redefine US relations with the world, putting pressure on Europe to increase defence spending and pressing forward with tariffs on key trading partners. However, stock market leadership so far this year has come from Europe and Asia and not the US, where the post-election 'Trump bump' has been fading. Inflation refuses to be cowed and hovering at 3% year-on-year is causing angst for central bankers who'd prefer to be cutting interest rates to support growth. The path to peace in Ukraine is not going to be a straight one, as Zelensky's public dressing down in the White House at the end of the month proves. Europe is feeling a little isolated, although it's been good news for the region's defence companies, whose share prices have reacted warmly on the need to rearm the bloc. Nevertheless, peace could be a boost to Europe's economy and stock markets, not least because it could lead to lower energy prices, which would be good news for all.

Portfolio Positioning/Changes

The concentration risk in the US stock market continues to concern us, where the 10 largest stocks account for nearly 40% of the market. Furthermore, our research indicates that when markets have been as concentrated as this, equally weighted indices typically go on to deliver superior returns over the next five years. As such, we have introduced the L&G S&P 500 US Equal Weight Index Fund, where all constituents have the same allocation and the 10 largest stocks only account for 2.4% of the fund. This will sit alongside the global passive market cap based funds. These changes should improve diversification and be beneficial for long-term returns.
