Lower risk

Higher risk

The portfolio is in this category due to historic risk and return characteristics demonstrated in the performance simulation, alongside the expected growth asset range between 45% - 75%. A risk indicator of "1" does not mean the investment is risk free.

Investor Profile

Typical investors in this portfolio are likely those looking for an enhanced income yield. Investors in the High Income portfolio are willing and able to accept moderate levels of volatility.

Portfolio Aim

The High Income portfolio seeks to provide an enhanced income yield from a portfolio of high income assets. The portfolio targets a distribution yield of 5% pa*.

*There is no guarantee this objective will be met. Capital is at risk.

Portfolio Characteristics

The portfolio is constructed using a blend of high yielding equity, fixed income and alternative investments. Whilst the manager seeks to moderate volatility in the portfolio – the asset classes used could mean higher levels of volatility in certain market environments.

Market and Portfolio Update

The most significant market story of 2025 so far has been President Trump and his tariff bonanza, impacting international trade with inflationary risks for the US consumer. Trump also pushed through his 'big, beautiful bill', which preserves tax cuts by slashing welfare spending, and simultaneously adding trillions to US national debt. Elsewhere, tensions have eased in the Middle East, and Prime Minister Starmer saw a revolt over welfare reform - leading to concerns that taxes rises could be needed.

With so much going on in the world, one might have expected markets to face a challenging 2025 so far. While they were certainly buffeted in April by you-know-who and his big board of tariff fun, most are in positive territory year-to-date. That said, global confidence in the US has taken a knock. Combined with a deteriorating fiscal backdrop, many investors have begun to question how much exposure to the US they should maintain - a theme we expect to persist.
